During the two weeks of his work in this place he has delivered some twenty-five discourses, besides exhorting, reading the scriptures, and singing. Such onstant efforts have been had at the expense of a diminution of physical force and impairment of facility of speech, and, at times, ecause of hoarseness, he could scarcely articulate with clearness. Despite this embar-rassment, he has accomplished much in "adding to the church," some twenty persons having made public confession of their re-ligious faith. The baptismal services in the
